摘要

The electoral system is the most fundamental mechanism for a democracy. It affects the development of party systems and even the operation of democratic politics in a given society. This paper concern about reform of the electoral system in the Legislative Yuan is whether this would reduce the negative influences of SNTV System on political system. This study analyzes the impact of electoral system on party representation, confirming that FTPT System would scale effective number of parties down in the congress, and cut the number of independent candidates to participate in the election. However, there were not evidences to support that Parallel Mixed-Member Electoral System would mitigate election bribery, and improve quality of Legislators.
